How to Watch Boston Celtics at Cleveland Cavaliers

There's a new era of the Celtics-Cavaliers rivalry brewing.

While the Celtics are the defending Eastern Conference champions built around the young duo of Jayson Tatum and Jaylen Brown, the Cavaliers are the East's up-and-comers with no shortage of young talent, with Donovan Mitchell, Darius Garland and Evan Mobley standing at the forefront.

Early in the season, the 5-1 Cavs and 4-2 Celtics sit side-by-side toward the top of the Eastern Conference standings.

If the first meeting between these two teams this season is any indicator, this one should be a classic. Just five days ago, the Cavaliers and Celtics met at TD Garden in Boston, where Mitchell and Caris LeVert each scored 41 points to lead Cleveland to a nine-point win in overtime.

Will the Celtics take one on the Cavs' home court, or will Cleveland make it two wins over Boston in five days?
